

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The present invention relates to a transparent grip having golf club, wherein the prints for public information like photos or pictures are incorporated in the grip and the content of the incorporated prints is observable from the outside.

Because the grip(G) is composed of a sheet layer(20) of an elastomeric material to increase the gripping and hitting senses and to alleviate the shock by covering the entire or a part of circumference of shaft(10), a coating film layer(30,30') to protect the sheet layer(20) and a transparent shell(40) as an integrally molded body, which is transparent enough to make the sheet layer(20) visible from the outside and which is formed with a cavity(400) to receive a shaft(10), the sheet layer(20) can keep the record of, for example, the address or name of the owner without the worry of blotting or staining. The sheet layer(20) made of an elastomeric material, the transparent thin coating film layer(30,30') formed with a number of fine projections and the transparent shell(40) made of special material, in combination, bring forth the effect of being soft and not slippery and giving the gripping assurance and snug feeling. Particularly, the invention has the advantage that individuals can incorporate the photographs, pictures or particular matters for various events or commemorations into the grips with ease and at reduced cost to make this invention very practical. (Fig.1)